

Please, no further media deregulation of ownership!

This country was founded on diversity, and too much has already been lost in the media of this country. I spend most of my time seeking news on the internet, as do most of those I know, seeking a breadth of ideas no longer available here in our mainstream media; I seldom watch television. The last thing we need is more media consolidation! The local radio stations, which used to have local DJ's and discuss local issues, no longer do so..they only have national feeds.

During our recent ice storm, which caused millions of dollars of damage, only one radio station I could receive was able to broadcast local emergency information. It was an outrage for those who needed to find urgent help!

Freedom of communication in the US is now worse than in much of the rest of the world, a sad state of affairs.